It then found its way into the hands of the raja of that part of the country, who one day, in a fit of generosity, presented this invaluable stone to a Brahman. The Brahman, not knowing the virtue of the gift, and being displeased at receiving a present apparently so worthless, threw the stone into the Nerbudda. When he was informed of what he had done, struck with shame and remorse, he plunged into the river in order to recover it if possible, but the water was so deep, that he could not reach the bottom. That part of the Nerbudda is said to be unfathomable, hence, unfortunately, no man has, ever since, found the stone aforesaid (Binuing). s.

The Devatās came in the shape of monkeys, as Ravana had gained no promise of safety from them; hence Hanuman was Rāma's general. Rāmachandra's mother's name was Kousalyā, his younger brother Bharata was son of Kaikeyī who was the cause of Rāma's going to the desert to perform devotions, on the banks of the Pampa-sindhu, mistaking that her son should reign the fourteen years that Rāma employed in the devotion. It was while performing his devotion too during his stay in the forest) in company with Lakṣmana (his brother by Sumanā) that Rāma appeared as a beggar, while he was absent hunting, and entered away Shitā, which gave rise to the war detailed in the Rāmāyaṇa. Shitā was daughter of Janaka Rāja, who had promised to give her to any person who could break a certain bow, which was done by Rāmachandra. When in the forest, he drew a circle round Shitā, and forbade her to go beyond it, and left Lakṣmana to take care of him; but Lakṣmana hearing some noise which alarmed him for his brother, left her to seek him; then it was that Rāma appeared and entered her out of the circle (gandī) and carried her off in his flying chariot; in the air he was opposed by the bird Jatayu, whose wings he cut and escaped. Rāmachandra reigned on Oudh (Ayodhya) before Christ 1600. s.
